prevention of surgical site infection

comprehensiveness

ZARYS ALPHAtex sets allow the user to customize products for a specific medical procedure, according to their individual requirements. Our offer includes a wide range of drapes of different weights, sizes and shapes, which can also be purchased separately. All materials, used in the production of ALPHAtex products, meet the requirements of current standards and are subject to rigorous quality control.

infection prevention

Prevention of Surgical Site Infections (SSI) is a critical task to ensure patient safety and surgical success. All procedures and preventive measures implemented should be tailored to the type of surgery, as well as to the individual needs of the patient. It is also important to adequately train medical personnel who, by following best practices, ensure that the risk of infection is reduced.

security

SSI occurs most often during surgical procedures where there is a risk of microorganisms entering an open surgical wound.

Microorganisms can come from two types of sources: exogenous causing infection transmitted from external factors such as personnel or medical apparatus, and endogenous leading to infection with the patient's bacterial flora from the immediate wound environment. There are two most common routes of infection: airborne and contact.

Many types of barriers are used to reduce surgical site infections, the most important of which are surgical drapes and gowns.

surgical drapes and gowns

(nomenclature derives from the standard PN-EN-13795 -1)

Surgical drapes are used to ensure microbiological cleanliness of the working area during surgery and to reduce the risk of bacterial flora migration from the patient's skin to the wound. They are also used to control the spread of bodily fluids.

Surgical gowns are an essential protective barrier. They prevent the transmission of infectious agents from the medical staff to the patient. They reduce the risk of spreading desquamated skin particles in the air in the operating room.

The ALPHAtex brand and its wide range of solutions are the result of over thirty years of ZARYS's presence in the medical market.

Sharing our experience and knowledge, we are confident that the use of ALPHAtex products ensures comfort, safety, and economic efficiency in daily work in operating theaters.

comprehensive operating room protection

The operating room is the heart of every hospital, where hundreds or even thousands of surgical procedures are performed, during which the skin is opened and incised. This can lead to infections or contamination of the surgical site, which is why maintaining the highest level of safety in operating rooms is crucial.

ALPHAtex product packaging is made according to the highest quality standards. The solutions used allow the user to easily open and safely remove the sterile product needed for the procedure.

Our medical product packaging is designed with safety, hygiene, and contamination protection in mind.

For ALPHAtex surgical drapes, ZARYS International Group uses a double packaging system involving the use of foil bags or smaller cardboard boxes and additional external protection in the form of a corrugated cardboard carton. This is to maintain the sterility of products delivered to the operating theater at every stage of transport.

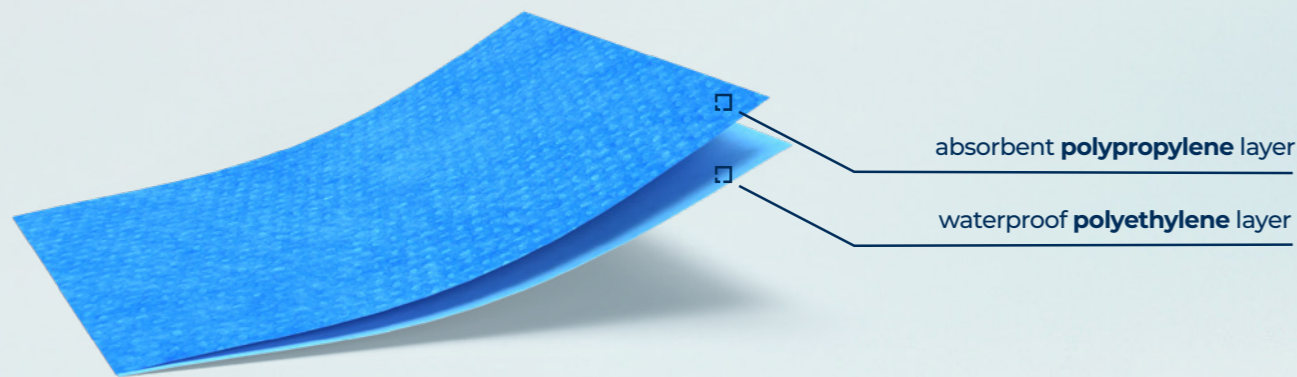

We use two types of individual packaging: paper-foil type and durable Header Bag with a TYVEC insert that allows sterilization processes. All contain a label with the product name, its graphic representation, and informative pictograms. Additionally, they are equipped with self-adhesive TAG labels for data archiving and information on the opening direction.

cellulose layer

cellulose layer surrounding the absorbent pad

absorbent insert

absorbent insert with superabsorbent to absorb body fluids

outer layer

outer layer to allow airflow

Absoform underpads are a solution that combines effective absorption with patient comfort. Thanks to the five-layer construction and the use of superabsorbent, they not only effectively retain fluids and bacteria, but also ensure optimal air circulation, which helps prevent bedsores.

The skin-friendly surface and effective odor reduction increase comfort. The resistance of up to 230 kg and the ability to safely transport the patient make the absoform a reliable tool in daily medical practice. It is a combination of innovation, safety and comfort.
